FATHER MURDERS CHILD, KILLS SELF

WIDOW IDENTIFIES DROWNED MAN FOUND IN BAY

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

These new safety zones in Oakland may be the last word and all of that, but . . .

* * * *

The zone signals are so high that if one doesn't see them and drives over them, he stands a good chance of either ruining his tires or of turning the car over.

* * * *

Perhaps the worst safety zones are in Portland. Here the signals are iron spikes, set up in the street, and are a constant menace to drivers.

* * * *

What this country needs more than anything else is automatic window raisers for sedans.

* * * *

How often have you parked your car with the windows down and while at the theater a rain storm starts.

* * * *

Now, our idea of an automatic window raiser would be one that is controled by a device which is sensative to the rain.

* * * *

When the first drop of rain hits the car, the patented device immediately raises all of the windows in the car.

* * * *

And the device should be adjusted so that it will air out the car when parked in the sun.

* * * *

All of us have parked a sedan on the sunny side of the street, raised up the windows and locked the car.

* * * *

The results are that when the driver returns to the car it is like a bakeoven inside.

* * * *

Now with this patented device a theromstat could be arranged so that when the temperature inside of the car gets above normal the windows will automatically open for a brief second and then will close.

* * * *

The more we think about it, the better the idea strikes us. When we get time to get around to it we'll start experimenting.

* * * *

If any of you readers have a good, eight or six-cylinder sedan which you wish to donate for the advancement of science, why drop around.

Woman Flees Fire In Nightclothes

Clad only in a flimsy negligee, Miss Margarette Jose, 1100 Liberty street, El Cerrito, early yesterday morning traversed the streets of El Cerrito in search of the fire department.

Her bare feet pattering on the cold sidewalks and streets, Miss Jose arrived at the fire department, breathless and informed the members her bed was on fire.

Although startled over the apparition of a woman clothed only in a night gown reporting fires at 4:10 in the morning, the El Cerrito fire department rapidly, and with much efficiency extinguished the blaze.

Miss Jose's mother and brother, sleeping in the house were unaware of the fire until the fire men arrived on the scene.

TOT FINDS BODIES OF TWO

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—UP—After brutally beating his nine year old daughter to death with a hammer, Domenico De Martini, laborer residing at 765 Lake View avenue, believed to have been suffering from a fit of maniacal despondency, ended his own life by sending a bullet through his brain today.

The double tragedy was discovered by a playmate of the De Martini child, who entered the De Martini home to find out "why Lillian hadn't come out to play."

The child lay dead upon her bed. Beside her lay the body of her father.

Note Found

A note ,spattered with blood indicating it was written after De Martini had killed his daughter was found addressed to his wife. It read: "Dear Wife: I could see no other way out. Ithink I must have been crazy all the time."

According to neighbors, De Martini had been out of work for some time. His wife, they said, left at the usual time this morning for her place of employment, a restaurant.

So far as friends knew, there had been no quarrels between the couple and they had seemed happy the day before when talking over a job which the man hoped to obtain.

Bodies Found

Shortly after, Mrs. De Martini left for work, the little girl was seen playing outside. Neighbors declared she went inside the house and did not reappear.

Police believe the murder and suicide occured shortly after six o'clock, when Mrs. Martini left for work, as a shot was heard only a few minutes after she left, neighbors declared. No attention was paid to the shot.

The note addressed to his wife, was unintelligible after the brief wording, as blood, presumably that of his daughter obscured the writing.

FIREMEN ENTERTAIN AT DANCE

A crowd that packed the dance hall of the East Shore park to capacity, last night attended the eleventh annual ball of the Richmond fire department.

An unofficial estimate placed the attendance at more than 1000.

Members of the committee in charge of the affair declared last night that the crowd more than fulfilled the expectations of the most optomistic.

Firemen attended the dance in great numbers, their blue uniforms brightly reflecting the polish of their carefully shined buttons.

The refreshment stand, in charge of the baseball team of the Richmond fire department, did a rushing business, hot and tired dancers thronging toward the mecca of soft drinks.

The checkroom, which had been remodeled for the affair, proved more than large enough to cope with the immense crowd that attended the affair.

Mayor A. L. Paulsen, and his daughter, Esther, led the grand march at nine o'clock, followed by throngs of firemen and their wives.

During the intermissions, popular raido stars of the eastbay headed by "Mac and his Gang" of KFRC fame, entertained the dancers.

SECRET NOTE FOUND BY ATTORNEY

LAGUNA BEACH, April 25. —(UP)—A belief that Mrs. Guy Bates Post and Mrs. Dorris Murray Palmer died together here last Thursday in fulfillment of a death pact, was advanced here late last night.

The theory was advanced by Moresby White, Santa Ana attorney, who served as counsel for both women, and who last winter aided them in drawing wills in which they left property to each other.

White declared that as administrator of the estate of Mrs. Post he went to her home and found a note in a writing desk which bared the plan of the women to die together.

The attorney refused to make public the contents of the notes, be opened by Moreshy White in which he said, was addressed "to case of an accident, and only in that case."

White said the note was signed by Adele Ritchie, the name under which Mrs. Post gained fame two decades ago.

White's theory is in direct conflict with that held by the police who believe that Mrs. Post killed Mrs. Palmer in a fit of jealousy.

He will face the local courts first on Monday, when his trial on jury bribing charges is scheduled to start. Lewis will ask for a postponement, it was said.

Lewis' return here was credited as a distince legal victory for District Attorney Buron Fitts, who went to the northwest to extract the promotor from McNeil island.

FABLES FOR THE FAIR

By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

The Jilter Jilted

ONCE upon a time there was a man named Max, whose wife didn't understand him.

He had been married fifteen years but, as he said, women change.

They become difficult—jealous—all that sort of thing.

There were, he declared, if you looked around, a great many disconsolate wives,

And they were invariably women who were in love with their husbands.

The husbands were no longer in love with them.

They may be in love with some one else.

Or they may have grown tired of love,

Their wives' intensity having exhausted them.

Whether their nostrils dilated with indignation, or whether they suffered in silence,

Such wives—according to Max—imported an element of righteousness into conjugal affairs

The sequel of which was often to be read in the police court.

For righteousness—still according to Max—when coupled with intensity

Will cause husbands to scream and tear their hair out.

Wives—so he continued to philosophize—made their awful mistake

When they meant to be everything to their husbands.

The presumption of a wife, he pointed out sternly, must be colossal,

If she imagined that she alone incorporated for her spouse

All that was worth while in the rich and varied realm of the "eternal feminine."

Such egotism, he declaimed, carried its own penalty.

For the vanity of women who presumed that they were all-sufficient to their husbands tired men,

And they neglected their wives for other women,

You get the idea—that is the sort of man Max was.

So he turned professional philanderer—

First, there was Phyllis, although Max soon found out

That Phyllis had her drawbacks—

"So amiable, so sensible in other respects,

"She was, like most girls, still a savage

"And regarded heavy expenditure on her behalf as a sign of her worth

"And felt herself slighted by a cavalier's attempts at economy."

Phyllis, in short, was more gold-digger than golden girl.

And a bit of a termagant and tartar, into the bargain.

And "it annoyed him that there should be this Phyllis waiting for him,

"A drag on his resources which she used, it would seem,

However, along came Sheila, who "looked the most beautiful girl in the room."

Women, Max complained, were always advising him

To concentrate on one woman if he wished to taste the maximum delight of sex.

He, however, found that sex was something which dissipated in concentration.

But that he never lost interest in women as a sex.

He now decided that his love for Sheila was the main thread of his life.

And Sheila thought Phyllis a cat.

The third girl friend was named Helen.

She played "Tristan" on the harp and ogled Max, with green eyes.

"There was no doubt," he decided, "about her friendliness, her wish to please,

For, by this time, Sheila had found out that he had a red face

And that he bored instead of amusing her.

Yet Helen turned out to be a more preposterous poseur than Max,

She was the sort of woman who, at thirty, called herself a "little baby girl"

And specialized in a personality exuding charm.

Here, then, was Max with three ladyloves

"Who showed no signs of wanting to leave him," he reflected, despairingly.

And each of whom, at one time or another, emphasized the fact

That Max, if he had got his divorce, would have married HER—

Proving, it would seem, that even a deserted wife, who misunderstands a man,

May have her uses!

Meanwhile, enter Comfort, who had read Max's books

And who knew that she was in love with him, though she had never seen him—

She traveled half across the world to meet Max,

And when he saw her coming down the gangplank, he knew that she exceeded his hopes—

"She had that friendliness written in her eyes, her movements,

"As though they had known each other for years;

"These long years in which he had been yearning for a being like hers;

"And here was his harvest, his golden harvest!"

Alas! Pending Heaven, Max had put on weight.

Despite rolling-pin and diet, his stomach was like a balloon—

He was middle-aged, he was fat.

And now was his Nemesis upon him, for Comfort turned him down.

She decided that she hadn't any use for him at all,

And he was heart-broken.

His state of mind, and that of many another philanderer, at the end of the tether, is summed up

In "Pending Heaven," the flippant new spring novel by William Gerhardi, which is the story of Max:

"Gradually he was coming to see, his vision was narrowing itself

"To a thin, dazzling ray of light which illumined the truth—

"That he could not have all the women in the world.

"And there was only one more woman he wanted,

"And she would not be his.

"All his life Max had had 'affairs' and was cynical about women.

"And now, for the first time, he had fallen in love deeply and in hopeless earnest.

"By an implacable spiritual law which, like a physical law,

"Precludes one from opening a door when one's strength is not equal to the pressure from without,

"He could do nothing to help himself."

War Graves

American war dead in France lie in beautiful, tranquil cemeteries, each with a marble tombstone; British and French graves are equally well taken care of, grouped around some commemorative monument. Only the German graves, with their weather-eaten wooden crosses, unchanged since the day when they were first put up, are not looked after. As far as Belgium is concerned, this is going to change. A gifted German sculptress, Frau Kaethe Kollwitz, has been asked to erect a monument near Langemarck, where that impetuous regiment of young German students who rushed into battle without sufficient training, lies in the mud of Flanders these many years. One of her own sons lies buried there. The monument will show two persons, a father and a mother, bent over a grave. Frau Kollwitz is being criticised because her monument will not sufficiently express a protest against war. But she says she merely wanted to express the real presence of parents near their children. They are seeking some consolation in being near them. To these parents, forever crushed by grief, there is no protest; all they can do is to be silent. Perhaps there lies in the conception of Frau Kollwitz a very strong protest: the old bent over the graves of the young, in an unending night of sorrow which no dawn will follow.

Reopening Of St. Paul's

St. Paul's Cathedral is to be reopened for worship on June 25, when the King will attend a great service. The dome, transepts and choir were closed to the public on March 31, 1925, and only the nave has been in use since that time. The preservation of St. Paul's has been carried on without interruption for seventeen years. The defects in the piers go back to the original building. Their solidity was only apparent, for behind the veneering of Portland stone they were filled with loose rubble and, besides, the iron that was use extensively to bind the masonry had seriously decayed. The architect, Sir Christopher Wren, had difficulties both about funds and materials in his colossal task, and parts of the structure, as he left it, contained inherent defects which have now been remedied. What has been done is to consolidate the whole central structure of the church from the crypt to the cross, so as to enable the overstrained piers to stand up against the vast weight of the dome. The piers have been made solid by grouting liquid cement into the interior and by reinforcing them with steel rods. The piers are now as firm as monoliths. The drum of the dome has been bound round with an enormous steel chain to prevent any bulging in the future.

Michael Angelo's Tragedy

In a lecture at the Sorbonne, Mme. Camille Mallarme, distinguished poetess, told recently of her research on the life and work of Michael Angelo. She had occupied herself lately with an inquiry on an earlier "Pieta" which the immortal master is supposed to have produced. Many previous biographers have been puzzled by this matter. What became of this earlier monument, if Michael Angelo ever executed it? Madame Mallarme gave the answer. For fifteen years the great sculptor, painter and architect worked on a model which he destined for his own grave. It was to represent a "Descent From the Cross," and was of huge proportions. The heavy demands which Pope Julius made on the artist's time often forced him to suspend work on the immense block of white marble. And once, when called to Rome for another job, he exclaimed in desolation at having to leave his masterpiece unfinished: "Ah, it would have been better if I had been a simple manufacturer of matches than to have been devoured by such a passion" (to finish the "Descent"). He kept the projected monument a strict secret, however, in his workshop in Bologne. One night he called in a friend, D'Urbino, to show him the finished work. Michael Angelo held up a lantern and D'Urbino beheld "what no human eye has even seen, or ever will see," as he writes in a letter which Mme. Mallarme has just recovered. Michael Angelo then asked his friend to advise upon a technical question, whether or not he should take something off the sides of the Christ. D'Urbino counseled against this. But Michael Angelo proceeded to carry out the change, in spite of the advice of his friend. In doing so he discovered an imperfection in the marble. Without more ado, he smashed the entire group. In this way the world lost what was perhaps the greatest masterpiece of sculpture of all times.

FOLLIES OF FASHION

Fitted, High Waistline Emphasizes Large Bust

By Marguerite Barnes

THE high-waisted frock requires careful adaptation if it is to be becoming to the woman whose bust is large in proportion to the rest of her body. The centre figure illustrates several points to be avoided by this type—the closely fitted high waist, the long, plain, tight sleeves, the long, straight skirt and the small hat. The heavy lines of the upper part of the body should be balanced by details which add width to the skirt, as shown in the figure at the right. A hat with a brim is also more becoming to this type, balancing the weight of the figure. The discreetly flaring cape dress at left, with its looser bodice and sleeves, is also good for this type.

A MINUTE OR TWO WITH BOOKS

By RUTH SNYDER

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

An Eighteenth Century Vagabond

WHAT a truly delightful rascal is Rogue Herries! Hugh Walpole may be forgiven for a few dull moments of fiction because of this new characterization. Rogue Herries, the swaggering vagabond gentleman who rode into the rain-swept Cumberland country bordering on Solway Firth in the vigor of his prime and strength—with "a longing for what was not, dream of Paradise round the corner, belief in a life that could never be. And in him also, riding him full strength, were lechery and drunkenness, lasciviousness and cruelty."

Francis Herries was a dual personality, a victim of mixed emotions. He could sell a mistress whom he had brought into this bleak country to house in the same home as his wife and children—and he could rescue a poor old soul who was being persecuted for witchcraft. He could be cruel to the tearful wife who loved him yet he could harbor a Catholic priest in an anti-Catholic home during a period of religious persecution. He could strike his own son across the face with a gold-headed cane, yet he could not run a sword into an unskilled young duelist who had challenged him. Rather did he prefer to receive the cruel slash that left his face scarred for life, even as he accepted the hatred of mankind, while seeing farther and hoping for more than his fellows hoped to get from life.

"Ah, but stay by me, David," he pleaded to his son early in their life together at Herries; "I am going the wrong way, and what matters it? It is only another man lost. But one day I may be faithful to something, and then I would have you witness it."

Francis Herries had three children by the tearful but devoted Margaret. One daughter, Mary, did not love her parents, preferring rather the family of Pomfret Herries, who lived affluently in the nearby town of Keswick. Deborah and David loved their father because they understood him and realized that he was a much-hated man. But David was the only man in the family that Rogue Herries loved. Between them was a bond, although David, in his young manhood, became as well loved as his father was hated.

Francis Herries had very early in his life in the North Country caused his neighbors to hate him. They hated him for bringing a mistress to live with his wife. They hated him for his affairs with other women. They hated him when he sold his mistress in a public place. They hated him for the pride he exhibited when intoxicated.

But no one but David knew of the Rogue's capacity for being faithful. After the death of the children's mother he saw the girl, Mirabell, and fell in love for the first time in his life. He watched her grow to womanhood to love and be loved by a young man interested in the Pretender's coming to Carlisle. In spite of his jealousy, Francis tried to save the lover from death, but his efforts were futile.

Forced by poverty and appreciation of Francis's goodness to her, Mirabell finally married him. They came to Herries to live with David and Deborah. When David married he brought his wife to live with them, but existence there eventually led David to break his word with his father—and they left him in order to establish a home of their own. Deborah, too, married and left the queerly mated couple together. Francis, too eager to win the love which Mirabell couldn't give to him, tried to force his love on her, with the result that she fled from his home.

The years then leap on. Rogue Herries goes seeking the wife he loved. Six years pass before he finally finds her playing in a cheap Shakespearian company. He wins her back again and brings her home to Herries. And then comes the final dramatic moment in a book, ofttimes overdramatized. At forty-four, Mirabell is to have her first child. Shortly before the delivery, old Francis goes to bed with a severe illness, and in a final moment of drama the reader sees the death of the two lovers (for Mirabell is now in love with her husband).

"There was silence in the house for a brief moment. Then there was a thin, wailing cry. The old woman and the new-born child were the only living things in the house."

On such a note do we close "Rogue Herries." There will be many who will not appreciate this book. Only those who at one time loved fairy tales will enjoy the fantastic parts of this story. But all who find Hugh Walpole a true artist will want to read this story if only to get acquainted with one of the most delightfully portrayed characters of the season.

"Rogue Herries" is published by Doubleday, Doran.

It's just about time for another woman to win.

No manuscript less than 30,000 words will be considered as a novel in this contest. Novel length is about 60,000 to 100,000 words. Carl Van Doren, Ellen Glasgow and Grant Overton will be the judges.

Books About the Theatre

"MYSELF AND THE THEATRE" is the title given by Mr. Theodore Komisarjevsky to his book of experience and advice on the theatre of to-day. Mr. Komisarjevsky has had a long and varied career in theatrical work, being perhaps remembered by an American public for his direction of "Peer Gynt" and Milne's "The Lucky One."

Mr. Komisarjevsky was director of the Imperial Grand Opera House in Moscow before the revolution and also under the Soviet regime. Of his last winter in Moscow (1918-1919) he has the bitter recollections of many hardships, with a subsequent nervous breakdown which forced him to go to London to recuperate. At that time, he writes, people drank a liquid made of grilled carrots instead of tea. There was no fuel with which to heat the house. Some people wore sandals made of the bark of trees or cardboard.

Mr. Komisarjevsky describes his experience as director at that time. "Perhaps the most trying thing in the working life of a theatrical director during the revolution," he writes, "was his relationship with certain committees . . . these committees existed in every theatre and attempted to organize them on socialistic lines."

For the student of the theatre there is interest in the chapters on "Finance and Art." "Systems of Acting," "My Methods of Production" and "The Teaching of Acting."

"Myself and the Theatre," by Theodore Komisarjevsky, is published by Dutton.

Helen Hull, whose new novel, "The Asking Price," has just been published by Coward-McCann, has been granted a Guggenheim fellowship for travel and study abroad. She will go to England and Ireland to gather material for her next book.

Emily Post, author of "Etiquette," has written a new book entitled "The Personality of a House." There are over 200 illustrations to aid her remarks on the building, remodeling and decorating of houses and apartments according to personality.

Your Home Garden

The Use of Fertilizer

PLANTS must be fed, and it is from the soil that they derive their food. There is practically no soil that does not require some fertilizer. We have the choice of three fertilizers: animal manure, chemicals, and vegetable matter.

Cow manure is probably the best for the majority of plants, especially for roses, pansies, violets and iris. Sheep manure is another all around fertilizer. When used for house plants use one part of manure to five parts of earth. When using sheep manure in the garden, never permit it to come in direct contact with young roots, as it is apt to burn them. Horse manure is the thing to use on clay soil, as it breaks up the adhesiveness of the clay. Hen manure is very heating and should be used very sparingly. Bone meal can be used very freely; the best time to apply this is in the spring. Always see that the manure is thoroughly incorporated with the soil. The best way to accomplish this is to remove some of the top soil, spade the manure into the subsoil and replace the topsoil.

Liquid sheep or cow manure can be easily made. Place a sack with twenty-five pounds of dried manure into a barrel or ash can of water. Keep this in a warm place at least ten days before using. Two ladlesful of this mixture should be added to a watering can of water. This can be used with perfect safety once every week.

Wood ashes are very good to sweeten the soil. They are especially good for asters and gladiolus. Never mix ashes and manure, as this will release the ammonia of the manure.

Soot is another excellent chemical fertilizer. It will increase the color of both foliage and flowers. The best way to use soot is to pour water over it and let it settle. This mixture is especially good for pansies and roses.

"Thirteen."

"When there's only twelve in a dozen, how did the bakers get that way?"

"Years ago in England the laws against bakers selling light-weight bread were very severe, and so, to make sure they were on the safe side, bakers added another roll, so thirteen articles came to be known as a baker's dozen."

"Why didn't they weigh their rolls?"

"Oh, go to bed."

DAY OF PRAYER FOR BAPTIST CHURCHES

NEW YORK, April 26.—Members of the 8,000 or more churches in northern Baptist territory from Maine to southern California will unite tomorrow in praying for the success of the great annual convention which this year will be held in Cleveland's Civic auditorium, May 28 to June 2, according to announcement made today at demoniational headquarters, 152 Madison avenue.

In issuing the statement regrading the Day of Prayer, Dr. W. H. Bowler, executive secretary of the Northern Baptist convention, stated that special stress would be laid upon the great missionary enterprises for the promotion of which all Northern Baptist churches were banded together. It was, he said, primarily for the transaction of business arising out of the support of the ten foreign mission fields and extensive home mission activities supported by Baptists that the convention was held.

Prayers are especially being sought, said Dr. Bowler, in behalf of the convention officials and employees charged with administering mission funds, which, he explained, apart from income from endowments, would amount next year to more than $5,000,000.

In addition to planning for the future, it was explained, the convention would this year attempt to review along lines the course of Christianity, with special emphasis upon missionary effort, in the nineteen hundred years since the day of Pentecost when the apostles first carried the Gospel of Jesus Christ into the Gentile world.

The entire program for the six days, Dr. Bowler said, had been built around the theme: "After Nineteen Hundred Years" and the committee headed by Dr. John M. Lackey of Central Baptist church, Hartford, Conn., had secured a number of outstanding speakers who would develop this theme from a variety of angles.

Among those listed to speak are Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of Park Avenue church, New York, and Dr. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis, recognized as the two outstanding leaders of theological thought within the denomination. Dr. A. Ray Petty, pastor of First Church, Kansas City, Mo., famed for it's men's Bible class of 10,000 members, and said to be one of the most popular orators in the Baptist pulpit, is slated for the convention sermon Sunday morning. The keynote address will be delivered by Dr. C. A. Barbour, president of Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Speakers from outside the denomination, Dr. Bowler said, would include Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, former assistant U. S. attorney-general, who will address a banquet for which preparations already have been made for 5,000 persons, and James C. Penney, multi-millionaire chain-store owner and philanthropist, a member of the Methodist communion, who will speak at a fellowship dinner for laymen, following the annual meeting of the National council of Northern Baptist laymen at which more than 2,000 business and professional men active in church work are expected to be present.

Special Sermons At Wesley M. E. Church Today

In cooperation with the American Humane Society Rev. C. G. Lindemann, pastor of the Wesley Methodist church, will deliver a sermon on "God and the Sparrows" at the morning services today.

"Is the Hope of Immortality Valid?" will be the subject of Rev. Lindemann's evening sermon. The Wesley church will furnish special music for both services.

Christian Science Lesson Subject

"Probation After Death" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon tomorrow in all churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of the mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the lesson-sermon will include the following from the Bible: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now, if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss, but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire" (Cor. 3:11-15.)

The lesson-sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Either, suffering or Science must destroy all illusions regarding life and mind, and regenerate material sense and self. The old man with his deeds must be put off. Nothing sensual or sinful is immortal. The death of a false material sense and of sin, not the death of organic matter, is what reveals man and life, harmonious, real, and eternal." (p. 296.)

The pastor will have his regular story for the little folks. He was forced to disappoint them last Sunday on account of the long Easter service.
Last Sunday was a red letter day in the history of our church. What a wonderful sight to witness a church crowded with happy, devout worshippers. Truly it was a 'Glad Easter' indeed. Why could'nt we make this the rule of the other fifty-one Sundays in the year, instead of saving up our religion for special occasions .Does this seem an idle dream? Not so, but it can become a joyous reality if you will only help us make it so.

SUIT TO DECIDE LA FOLLETTE POWER

SHEBOYGAN,, Wis., April 26.—UP—Future of the La Follette Progressive forces which have made Wisconsin irregular in Republican politics for many years may hinge on the outcome of their ouster suit against Governor Oscar J. Kohler, millionaire bath tub manufacturer.

Election of fiery young Phillip F. La Follette, opposing Kohler for renomination this fall, would restore progressive power with a 35-year old son of "Old Bob" occupying his father's former chair as governor and a 37-year old son wearing the United States Senatorial toga handed down by the father whose name has perpetuates.

Defeat Seen

Defeat of the young Progressive who seeks the governorship by the man he is now trying to oust from that office would definitely check the insurgency movement in which Wisconsin long has led other midwestern states. It also would open the way for Kohler to oppose Senator John J. Blaine in 1932.

Kohler of Kohler village, whose tinted bathroom fixtures are manufactured near here under conditions that have gained him wide reputation as an industrialist and humanitarian, was drafted by regular Republicans in 1928.

Thousands of Wisconsin citizens wer einvited to Kohler village during the campaign to witness what he had developed there.

"I wanted them to see the village which had been my life work, and to judge for themselves the kind of a citizen I was," the governor testified at the outset trial. "I had no idea I could influence the vote of anyone by giving them a sandwich, a mint, cigar or lemonade."

Bears Cost

Testimony disclosed the Kohler company bore the initial costs of this entertainment and later was reimbursed by relatives of its executive.

No sooner than Kohler overwhelmingly defeated Congressman Joseph D. Beck, the Progressives' choice for nomination as governor, than he faced accusations of excessive campaign expenditures, violating the corrunt practices act. La Follette signed the complaint on which another Progressive, the attorney general, authorized ouster proceedings in the name of the state of Wisconsin against its governor.

Den'es Plea

Pointing out the state Supreme Court had held a candidate could be held accountable solely for personal expenditures or those expressly authorized by him, he ruled no testimony could be offered regarding money spent on behalf of the governor by political organizations unless it was first shown that he directed them.

The states' attorneys were prepared to show that regular Republican groups supporting the ticket headed by Kohler reported expenditures and obligations of nearly $100,000 in the 1928 campaign. By inference and circumstantial evidence, they hoped to connect him with these organizations after stressing the amounts spent.

If the jury finds that the big man of this community did, in fact, violate the corrupt practices act which calls for forfeiture of his office, he will appeal to the people as a political martyr, as well as to the higher courts.

Progressives can rightfully claim the state again if Kohler is defeated both in court and at the election.

STRIFE LOOMS IN COTTON PROBE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 26.—UP— Senatorial investigation investigation into the operation of the Oklahoma Cotton Growers association may result in bitter strife among the 30,000 members of the organization concerning a $2,937-436 receivership suit filed against the association.

Senator Elmer Thomas in Washington said he desired full information of the controversy before taking active steps toward instigating any federal inquiry. An Oklahoman asked Thomas to request the investigation.

An attack on policies of the Federal Farm Board also appeared imminent while chaos continued within the cotton association with its membership wrangling over Manager Sam Morley's administration's business affairs.

When testimony on the Oklahoma association was given before the Senate agricultural committee last winter, Former Manager C. L. Stealey, of the organization charged that Carl Williams, federal farm board member, promulgated a system of operation that resulted in the association gambling on the stock exchange.

Farmers Affected

Thousands of farmers residing in every county in Oklahoma will be affected by the $2,937,436 receivership suit field by 30 association members. The suit will be heard next week.

Organized in 1921, the association has extended its activities to every section of the state until its annual business transactions totaled hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Filing of the suit culminated a feeling of dissension that has existed within the association several months.

Unfriendly Shippers

Morley charged the suit was instigated by shippers unfriendly toward the cooperatives and the Federal Farm Board and said it was "another move to cause embarrassment." He said he felt confident of the outcome of the suit.

Several association directors have rallied to Morley's support and said they have full faith in his ability and integrity.

The suit charged a $2,000,000 deficiency of funds, and Morley was alleged to have disposed of 30,000 bales of cotton in the season's pool, for which the association has not settled. He is also alleged to have squandered $1,000,000 belonging to growers by buying thousands of bales of spot cotton and further contracts on margin.

OUT OF DOORS TALKIE SHOWN AT FOX

The opening today at the Fox-California theater of "Montana Moon" calls attention to some interesting data in connection with the preliminary arrangements and the filming of this production.

Sometime ago, Metro Goldwyn-Mayer, foreseeing the possibilities in a picture laid in the mountains of the west with a large part of the cast recruited from cattle ranges and with cowboy slang and songs as an added novelty, purchased an original story by Sylvia Thalberg and Frank Butler dealing with the experiences of an eastern society girl who visited her father's properties in Montana and fell in love with a cowpuncher.

Selecting Joan Crawford as the star and Malcolm St. Clair as director of the production, the company then proceeded to make preparations for what was planned to be one of the screen innovations of the year—a musical western picture. A supporting cast of well-known players was assembled which included John Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian, Ricardo Cortez Karl Dane, Cliff Edwards, Benny Rubin and Lloyd Ingraham; Joe Farnham was engaged to write the dialogue, while the music, exclusive of the original cowboy ballads, was entrusted to the joint hands of Nacio Herbe Brown, Arthur Freed Clifford Grey and Herbert Stothart all of whom had written songs hits for previous MGM pictures.

The scenes of "Montana Moon" are said to be among the most picturesque ever obtained for camera purposes including vistas of cattle grazing in wide valleys, unusual shots of canyons and mountain precipices, campfire scenes and sequences depicting the various activities of cowboys, roping cattle and engaged in other purely Western pursuits.

Miss Crawford's role is reported to be a combination of her old "wild youth" forte and a newer more mature and emotional acting. John Mack Brown, first seen opposite the star in "Our Dancing Daughters" again has the featured supporting role in the new offering.

Fox talking News and Lloyd Hamilton in 'Grass Skirts" complete the program.

RUGGLES STARS IN ROADHOUSE NIGHTS

Can an actor become a telegraph operator? Or if he could become one, would he want to?

Cahrles Ruggles, veteran comedy character actor of stage and screen proves that an actor can both become a telegraph operator and like it.

In 'Roadhouse Nights" Ruggles plays the part of a newspaper reporter sent out to cover the activities of a group of rum-runners. He is captured by the liquor ring and in one of the ensuing scenes is forced to send a message in telegraphic code.

While the picture was in production, Ruggles took daily lessons in the Morse code from Oliver Benson, a former telegraph operator now on the engineering staff of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. He learned the message he was required to make and it was duly recorded by the camera and microphone.

Whether he pursued the task with alacrity or not will be seen and heard by audiences at the Fox-California theater on Tuesday next when "Roadhouse Nights" opens there for a two day run.

"Roadhouse Nights" is an original story by Ben Hect, co-author of last season's stage sensation "The Front Page" and the author of the George Bancroft picture "Underworld."

HORSEWOMEN TO APPEAR IN CIRCUS

Those who witness the performances of the Cole Brothers circus, which will exhibit in Richmond, Saturday May 3 will see the world's greatest and most daring horsewomen perform. The collection of women riders with the Cole Brothers circus is said to be unsurpassed by any other circus in the entire world. It includes winners of the noted steeple chase classics of England, frontier days celebrations at Cheyenne, Wyo. and the Calgary stampede, in Canada.

The outstanding horsewomen in the United States today is accredited by all to be Miss Dixie Baldwin, a girl from the "Golden West" who lives up to all of the traditional heritages of that section of the country. She is one of the leaders of the horsewomen with the Cole Brothers circus this year and is being paid a salary by Mr. Cole that is unprecedented in the American circus history.

Following her sensational success at the Frontier Days celebration in Wyoming and at various other noted rodeos, Mr. Cole approached Miss Baldwin with a view of signing her for a tour with the Cole Brothers circus. At that time Miss Baldwin would not listen to talk of a circus tour.

"Wait", she said, "until I have proved myself to be what the newspapers and authorities say I am now, 'America's leading horse woman.' When I have tried my skill at the Calgary stampede in competition with the most skillful women riders of the world and if I am successful I will talk to you about a contract."

Mr. Cole waited. A few months later while reading the morning paper aboard his private car he read headlines on the front page which told that Miss Dixie Baldwin had been declared the greatest woman rider in America. Immediately he wired Miss Baldwin. He received this answer:

"Your offer accepted. Will join circus in New York next week."

Since that time the Cole Brothers circus has been able to offer America's best in women riders. Besides Miss Baldwin there are those spectacular European horsewomen, Miss Peggy DeMartini, and Miss Winnetti Roberta. Miss Lillian De Jarnette, the society equestrienne, also furnishes many of the big thrills of the performance. These stars are assisted by 20 of the leading horsewomen of the world.

Performances will be given here at 2 and 8p. m. and the doors to the mammoth menagerie will open at 1 and 7 p. m. At 11 a. m. a spectacular street parade will wend its way through the principal down town streets.

CHEVROLET SIX VISITS HOME OF WRITER

In the silent mountainside fastness, a few miles from Morgan Hill, California, stands a memorial to one of America's most famous authors, Frank Norris. This tribute to Norris, a crescent shaped bench, erected to his memory by Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson and Ge'ett Burgess ,bears the fitting inscription: "Frank Norris, 1870-1902. Simpleness, and gentleness and honor and clean mirth."

Norris' name is inextricably bound up with that of the Great West. His novel, "The Octopus" a story of the wheat-growing in the San Joaquin valley, in California, the first of the trilogy of the wheat series, is regarded by many as the great American novel. "The Octopus" sing with the glory of nature; and is morbid and desolate with the cries of men who cannot control the forces which seek to eliminate them. For Frank Norris, the realist, refused to hold out his hand for pennies, as he often said; he lways told the truth. This particular school concerns itself with problems which affect the human race; sociological problems which strike deep at all humanity. Norris' philospohy can be compared to Stevenson's phrase: "The Giant of circumstance hath done this."

Recently a party of literary people visited the Norris shrine in their new Chevrolet six, according to Connell and Schumate, local Chevrolet dealers .

The cabin in which Norris wrote and lived in the mountains is still standing near the memorial. The name of Frank Norris is often confused with that of his brother, C. G. Norris, the author of "Brass", "Bread" and other best-sellers. Frank Norris was born in San Francisco, was educated at the University of California, and at Harvard and studied art in Paris. He traveled much and served in the Boer war, in which he contracted an ailment which eventually caused his death.

His books include "The Octopus" a story of the growing wheat in California: "The Pit," a story of the juggling of the world's wheat by the gamblers in the stock market; "The Wolf," which was to have been the third of the series, was interrupted by Norris' death. "The Wolf" was to disclose the dire evils resulting from with-holding the food-stuffs of the world. The scene of "The Wolf" is in the steppes of Russia and concerns itself with a terrible famine.

Norris also wrote "McTigue" from which Erich Von Stroheim produced the motion picture, "Greed." The late Rudolph Valentino played in another adaptation of one of Norris' works, "Moran of the Lady Letty."

New San Juan Highway

Statistics On Auto Accidents

Automobile accidents occur faster than the population increases in the United States, according to census bureau estimates reaching the California State Automobile association. A serious automobile injury occurs every 31 seconds, whereas the average increase in population is only one every 33 seconds.

INDEPENDENCE

Economic studies show that as automobile sales increase, benefits are felt proportionately throughout the nation's industrial system, according to the California State Automobile association.

PEDESTRIANS UPHELD IN COURTS

SACRAMENTO, April 26. —The Division of Motor Vehicles today called the attention of motorists of California to the fact that the courts of this and other states in recent months, have held almost unanimously that pedestrians have the right of way over motor vehicles.

Desirous of informing the motorists of the need of careful driving where pedestrians are concerned, the division's bulletin pointed out that court decisions have held that motor vehicles are required to give way to pedestrians, and that pedestrians have frequently collected heavy damages from motorists who failed to do so.

"The large number of fatal accidents involving pedestrians and the fact that the courts almost invariably award damages to the pedestrian plaintiff should be sufficient reason for extreme care in crowded streets and on highways used by pedestrian traffic," the bulletin said.

The bulletin also said that recent decisions by the courts have produced the following points in favor of the pedestrian:

The pedestrian has the right to use all parts of the highway, being chargeable only for the exercise of a due amount of care.

The pedestrian hit and injured in the center of the street cannot be considered as negligent because he was there instead of on the sidewalk.

The pedestrian is not guilty of negligence because he fails to look behind him. The pedestrian is not bound, as a matter of law, to be looking and listening continually to see if motor vehicles are approaching.

The rule of reasonable precaution requires that the driver be certain the pedestrian is aware of the approach of his vehicle at such distance as to avoid running over him.

The driver who strikes a pedestrian because he was blinded by the sun or lights, cannot escape responsibility by offering this as an excuse.

"It will be seen from these decisions that the odds are against the motorist who hits a pedestrian and strives to avoid payment of damages," the division's bulletin said. "The courts have repeatedly held with the pedestrian, the old common law freedom of use of the king's highway by foot passengers having been modified but little by statutory enactment.

Our records prove that a large amount of the damage suits now growing out of the use of motor vehicles, involves pedestrian accidents. Despite this, however, the fatal accidents to pedestrians increase every year.

"The only recent charge in the law affecting pedestrians is to require them to walk on the left hand side of public highways. This does not, in any sense, mean that the motorist must not exercise due caution in avoiding pedestrians, even though they may be walking on the wrong side of the road.

"The only safe rule for the motorist to follow is to be on the alert constantly to avoid striking pedestrians. This is particularly true in crowded streets where foot passengers, many of whom are likely to be aged or crippled are numerous.

BUICK TOURS SAN JUAN ROAD

Pacific coast good roads enthusiasts are rejoicing over their successful battle for the elimination of the San Juan grade on California's coast highway and the approval of the Prunedale cut-off which is to take its place as a vital link in this important artery, according to C. C. Kratzer, local Buick dealer. A survey of the new route has been ordered forthwith, following an appropriation of $10,000 by the State Highway commission.

The new Panhandle route will still further shorten motoring time between cities of the coast district and will bring the famed resorts of the Monterey peninsula twenty minutes nearer the populated centers to the north and northeast. The same time saving will be effected in a straight north-south coast tour.

The Prunedale stretch will also eliminate most of the curves and cut the grade to a fraction of its present elevation, and at a cost no greater than that of maintaining the present highway. The new route will cut the grade elevation from 1015 feet to 500 feet, or less than half of its present elevation. It will increase the radius of curves from 100 feet to 1000 feet and the minimum visibility on curves from 75 feet to 600 feet. On the San Juan grade there are 113 turns; the new route will have but 38. These are a few of the advantages of the new route gleaned by scout party dispatched to the Prunedale Rocks district and Salinas in a 1930 Marquette sedan last week.

The plan given approval by the State Highway Commission, as learned by the Marquette party, is: Relocation of the highway west of the present grade, starting from a point north of San Juan and rejoining the highway at a point south of the present grade; the present highway to be maintained as a part of the state highway system as an extension of the Hollister-San Juan route; the short piece of the present highway north of San Juan to be maintained by San Benito county as a county road, with the understanding that legislation will be enacted making it a part of the state highway system.

Funds for the construction of the new route are not available at present but the commission approved a recommendation to include approximately $800,000 for the work in the next state biennial budget. Although actual construction will be delayed until these funds are provided, the commission announced that the survey would be started immediately.

Secondary Fuel System

The motorist who wishes to insure against fuel system failure on his car may provide a secondary system, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile association. If the car is equipped with a fuel pump, a vacuum system may be installed in such a way that a quick change-over may be made, or vice versa.

Motorists From Canada Spend Big Sum In U. S.

Canadian motorists will be the principal sources of foreign tourist revenues in the United States, which are expected to approximate $175,000,000 during 1930, according to reports reaching the California State Automobile association from the foreign travel bureau of the American Automobile association.

The sum of $163.489.000 was spent by foreign visitors in the United States in 1927, and this amount was increased to $167,-033 000 in 1928. The figures for 1930 will easily reach $175,000,-000, it is estimated. Figures for 1928, the last available, show that Canadian motorists spent $59,700,000 in the United States, and those coming from Canada by rail and steamer spent $26,000,000. The tourists from overseas spent $53,-696,000 in the same period.

To this must be added $6,210,-000 derived from those coming across the Mexican border; $9,-247,000 spent by visitors from the insular possessions, and $7,000,000 expended by foreign sailors on shore leave in the United States.

The entire tourist revenu received from foreign visitors is approximatel the same as the total spent by American motorists in Canada alone.

Don't Pour Battery Water Thru Funnel

Distilled water for the batteries should never be poured through a metal funnel. It is absolutely necessary that this water be kept free from all mineral impurities.

Sudden Stops Impose Heavy Machine Strain

The sudden application of brakes while traveling at any rate of speed imposes a severe strain on all parts of the car, remarks L. G. Evans, general service manager for the National Automobile club. Few motorists realize the amount of energy utilized in bringing a car to a stop. The same drivers who know that it requires tremendous horsepower to accelerate a car are unmindful of the fact that braking may be explained in similar terms.

No sensible driver would expect his car to withstand the severe strain of running at top speed for any distance, and no good driver should impose upon the mechanism of his car by demanding that it withstand the distortion of sudden stops.

LOCAL NETMEN WILL MEET MOSSWOOD

The Richmond Tennis club athletes will clash with the Mosswood net squad this morning on the local city hall courts. The matches are scheduled to start at 10 o'clock.

The local tennis players should not have great difficulty in handling the invading athletes from Mosswood this morning. The Mosswood club has yet to win its first tourney in this year's inter-club competition, and it is at present in lowest place. The Richmondites have themselves not been very successful this season, being unable to rise above third place. However, they have lost the majority of their contests by narrow margins, and are rated far superior to the Mosswood boys.

The Richmond men who are expected to participate in today's singles are: Clare Bryant, Jimmy Hurley, Jack Murdock, Phil Carlin, Irwin Sutton, and Bert Childs. In the doubles, Richmond will enter the following teams.

Hurley and Carlin; Hays and Murdock; Barrow and Irwin Sutton.

Carl Peterson, one of Richmond's fastest net men, will be unable to play in today's tournament because of an injury to his foot.

EAST WINS IN U. S. RELAY MEET

PHILADELPHIA, April 26. —(UP)—Yale turned back vigorous challenge from the Ohio State university to give the east a victory in the first American relay championship to be contested in the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival this afternoon, by winning the 480-yard shuttle hurdle races in 1:04:3.

The Buckeye quartet, with their star, Rockaway, running anchor, came fast at the finish, but Gerald Devoe, a long legged Eli, held the advantage given him by his team mates, Childs and Bertan. New York University was third and the Army fourth.

In was another day of sunshine suited to the fast performances on the cinders, with a very slight breeze from the southwest, but not favoring the sprinters appreciably. Nearly 20,000 spectotars were in the stands to watch and saw the last of more than 3000 school and college athletes in action.

Wins Hammer

P. Flanagan, of Holy Cross, was the day's first winner, taking the special hammer throw event with a toss of 158 feet, 2 7-8 inches. Vonck, of Harvard was second, and F. Conner, of Yale, third. Leo Sexton, of Georgetown, one of the favorites, was in poor form and failed to place.

Bates College provided another upset by running off with the 2-mile college relay championship, with Ohio State second and Harvard third.

Captain Chapman of Bates ran a great anchor half mile to give his team the victory by three yards in 7:52:7.

Ohio State's half mile relay team won the college championship of America at that distance, and set a new carnival record of 1:26:8 to win permanent possession nof the Mask and Wig challenge cup.

Breaks Record.

A smashing finish by George Simpson accounted for the fast time which cut .2 seconds from the record set by the Buckeyes in 1929. It was Ohio's third victory since 1922, when the cup was first put up.

Soccer Club To Meet Shell Oil Eleven Today

All is in readiness for one of the greatest soccer events of the local season—the battle between the Richmond Soccer club and the Martinez She'l Oil eleven of Martinez. Fans from Richmond and Martinez will flock to the Alhambra high school athletic field where the game will be played at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The object of the Richmond and Martinez soccer ath'etes will be to break a one to one tie played by these two teams several weeks ago. Both squads are excellent defensive squads, and today's game is expected to be exceptionally even ly fought.

Highlanders Swamped By Richmond

The Richmond high school tennis team yesterday swamped the best net stars that Piedmont had to offer, winning five matches to the Highlander's one.

Th matches, which consisted of four singles and one double, were played as follows:

Singles

James Hurley, Richmond, defeated Paul Reinhardt, Piedmont, 6-1, 6-2.

Darrow Sutton, Richmond, defeated Dick Pitcher, Piedmont, 6-3, 6-4.

Phil Carlin, Richmond, defeated Bob Haynor, Piedmont, 6-1, 6-2.

Harry Reedall, Piedmont, defeated Adrian Newman, Richmond, 5-7; 6-4; 6-2.

Doubles

The other doubles match was called off by mutual consent.

The matches were in the manner of practice for th netmen, the A. C. A. L. season starting some time early in May. One previous series of practice tilts have been engaged in by th Richmondites, when they were defeated by Berkeley high.

WALKOUT IN PARKER CASE PLANNED

WASHINGTON, April 26.—(UP)—Southern democrats plan to "walk out" on the administration in the close senate fight opening Monday over the confirmation of Judge John H. Parker, of North Carolina, to the United States supreme court, the United Press learned today on reliable authority.

The movement started when Less C. Ovorman, the 76-year old senator from North Carolina, who has championed Parker causes for the administration thus far, served notice this afternoon on the republican leaders that he would not undertake the leadership of the floor fight in Parker's benalf.

It was also learned that six southern democrats already have arranged to be absent when the vote is taken, and more of their colleagues are making similar arrangements.

Fight Seen

The move is of major importance in the political conflict over the supreme court appointee, because it has been admitted generally that Parker must get the support of the southern senators of the opposing party if he is to win confirmation.

Administration forces are split recent polls showing no more than 27 of the 56 republican senators ready to stand by President Hoover's selection. If even six democrats who would vote for Parker avoid the final vote, his rejection will be virtually unavoidable.

Overman's retirement deprived the administration of valuable support. When the debate opens at 3. p. m. Monday, Overman will deliver a brief statement in Parker's behalf, making clear his support for the nominee, but relinquishing his leadership in the fight. Then he will yield to Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, who is to lead the fight against Parker. By this move, Borah will add another chapter to his political break with the President since the last campaign.

To Retire

Informed of Overman's intention to retire, republican leaders designated Sentors Fess, of Ohio, and Herbert, of Rhode Island, to conduct the contest in Parker's behalf. They are the only republicans who have publicly announced their intention of supporting Parker.

Despite these adverse advents, Parker's friends are planning to put up the best fight possible.

They still claim victory. Former Internal Revenue Collector David H. Blair, unofficial manager of the Parker forces, said he expected the nominee would be confirmed, and declared that Parker had no intention of withdrawing.

Reports Denied

From Overman's office, Blair made public three telegrams from North Carolina, denying reports said to have been circulated by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to the effect that negroes of the state were being intimidated over the Parker appointment.

Governor Max Gardner wired he had investigated the situation and found the charges of intimidation "totally unfounded."

"Relations between races continue peaceful, harmonious and most cordial," he said.

Surely Senators will seen the animosity and motives behind these attacks and observe the manifest distinction between alleged political pronouncements and judicial acts under oath.

"Judge Parker is free from bias and will be impartial toward all races and classes.

"If he is defeated now, the victory will be credited to the Association for the Advancement of Colored People on extraneous issues."

Y. M. I. NINE, COREYS TO MEET

The baseball athletes of the Richmond Y. M. I. will oppose the strong Corey Garage aggregation today at two o'clock on the El Cerrito lot.

Both the Coreys and Y. M. I. boys were victorious in last Sunday's contests. Thep are both regraded as two of the strongest outfits in Contra Costa county, and today's game is therefore expected to bring out one of the largest crowds of the local baseball seasn.

"Lefty" Brendell will occupy the box for the Corey Garage nine, with Ribert San Miguel on the receiving end.

Viano will probably do the chucking for the Y. M. I. outfit, while Morrison will do the receiving.

The complete lineup of the Corey Garage team for today's game includes: Klatt, rf; Muy'e, 3b; Matteri, ss; Prolo, 2b; Baldwin, 1b; H. Brendell, p; and San Miguel c.

CARDS SWAMP HUSKIES 96-35

STANFORD, April 26. —(UP)—Finding the Huskies even easier than California had been, the strong Stanford track team ran away from the University of Washington today by a score of 96 to 35.

The Cardinals swept away the century behind "Heck" Dyer, long legged blond flier, and came back to sweep the board in the javelin throw, 220 low hurdles, pole vault and broad jump.

Only in the half mile did the Huskies flash balanced strength—Gonserch and Montoe trotting in behind Kiser for a clean sweep.

In the weights, Earl Jessups, Husky football star and touted clubswinger, was forced to bow to a 51 feet 4 3-4 inches by Harlow Rothert, who, like Jessup, was a good man.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

"That would be a damn-fool thing to do," he said. "No good tryin' to rush him. I said that from the start." He was speaking quite coolly. "It's no use stayin' here. I'm goin' back to me boat—"

"You're giving in!" cried Wade.

"It's the only thing you can do," said Kapa. "Tomorrow night I'm taking her to my mountain village and going to marry her there. I've kept her for that. I haven't touched her yet. I'm keeping her for marriage. Oh, a great marriage it will be! They're making ready up there in the mountains now for it, and as soon as they're ready we will go. Tomorrow night I take her up there! A great marriage, native-fashion, with feasting and dancing and all the rest of it! She don't mean anything to me—as a woman. It's only that she's white! One of the race that treated me like a bit of dirt! How does that sound to you, white men?"

O'Shane shook his fist at the man on the platform, then signaled to his crew-boys and turned to Wade.

"What sort of a swine do y' think I'd be to give in?" he said in a tone that was vibrantly intense despite that it was hardly louder than a whisper. "Leave my Stella, my little, brown-haired Stella in that devil's hands! See here, my boy! I'm goin' to do it—somehow! Let 'im think I'm givin' in. It'll be all the better. It's no use stayin' here. I'm goin' aboard my schooner to think out a plan. Givin' in! By God, I'm not! Even if it costs my life! If y' knew how I loved her, y' wouldn't talk about me givin' in!"

There was courage and determination in his tone, and his lips were tightly set. It came to Wade with tremendous force that the speaker of those words might have been a scoundrel, but there was no doubt whatever that he was a brave man and a splendid lover.

"The only way is to beat him by strategy," O'Shane added, and, with his crew-boys about him, went down to his small boat.

Wade had forced himself to a comparative calmness. Strategy! The word had impressed itself deeply upon him. On the face of it, Kapa was more likely to be outwitted by strategy than by any storming tactics.

Dolobe, beside him, was showing uneasiness at the fact that there were now only two of them among all these savages. Wade paid him no heed. Kapa called jeeringly to O'Shane as the latter's small-boat made its smooth way across the water:

"I'll tell your wife you were here! She'll be glad to know you were so close! Oh, very glad!"

Wade paid him no heed, either. Strategy! he repeated inwardly. He looked about him.

He took in the position of the Sacred House, its relation to the beach, the swamp, and the other houses. If only he could get in there unobserved, he thought, under cover of the night, say, and get to Stella's side! It would make all the difference.

He looked again at the swamp. And then the idea flashed upon him that he could approach the village from there. In the darkness of the night he could row ashore to a point some distance from the village, leave the boat, and make his way on foot through the swamp. Once in the village, he would trust to luck and the inspiration and contingencies of the moment for getting within the Sacred House.

"I'll do it!" he said to himself. Then, ignoring Kapa and the jeers Kapa called after him, he turned and, with Dolobe, went to the small-boat and returned to the cutter.

CHAPTER XVII

At a meal of sorts in the cabin—he was in no humour for eating, and ate only in order to maintain his strength for the task before him—he related to Moira and Lo-oru all that had happened ashore, and told what he proposed to do. Then he went up on deck to await the coming of the time to make his attempt to reach Stella's side.

The women joined him, Lo-oru to sit with her head in her hands and never speaking, Moira to lie back in a deck-chair and, for the greater part, stare across the darkness of the sea.

"It's too dangerous," she said once.

"Dangerous for Stella——" said Wade.

"I mean for you. Is there no other way?"

"None that I can see."

"There must be! There must! The risk for you is too great, David!"

He moved away from her, fearing she would set out upon a campaign of trying to dissuade him. But she said no more, and resumed her staring across the sea.

At half-past two he hauled the small-boat alongside and, after examining his revolver, prepared to get down over the side.

"Oh, my dear, be careful!" came Moira's whispered voice. "I—I shall be so very anxious——"

She came to him, with outstretched arms. She was trembling. He feared she was about to kiss him.

"I'll be careful," he whispered back, and went quickly down into the boat.

The point of the beach upon which he had decided to land was not so easy to find as he had thought. In the darkness all of the shore seemed the same. There was just the long blur of it. Ever now and then he rested on the oars, turned his head and studied the land.

The shore showed up suddenly, as is the manner of objects encountered on nights as dark as this. The boat grounded. Wade lay on the oars and listened. There was still no sound in the night. The full tide lay motionlessly in against the mangrove roots. He calculated he was less than a half mile from the village. Cautiously he stepped out into shin-deep water and made the boat fast to a tree. Then he waded in among the mangroves a little way.

The mangrove-roots stood hooped above the water to the height of his knees. He climbed on one and, clinging to the trunk of the tree, felt with his other foot for a progressive foothold. Finding it, he brought both feet on to it, and felt for the next foothold. It was the only means by which a mangrove swamp could be traversed, and his progress was slow.

Presently he became aware of all manner of noises. The swamp seemed to have wakened into life. Far to the left a night-bird made a crying like the crying of a fretful child.

Then when, by his more or less inadequate calculation, he had covered half of the distance to the village, there came a sound different from the others—the sound of a heavy body striking the water from no great height. He stopped, standing on a root and clinging to the tree from which it grew.

"A man!" he breathed.

He cursed inwardly, telling himself he might have known that Kapa would not leave this approach to the village unguarded. Assuredly Kapa was cunning!

For what seemed a long time he stood there on the curved and slippery root. The splashing ceased, thereby indicating that the man had climbed back on to the roots. Wade's ears, now attuned to every sound about him, heard clearly each soft contact of the other's feet with the roots. Evidently the man was going to the village; with the sharp eye and ear of the native he had discovered Wade's approach, and was returning to report.

Wade determined to follow the man to the hard ground, overtake him, gag or otherwise silence him, and go on. Quickly, yet cautiously, he resumed his journeying over the roots.

After a time he found that the roots were not so high as they had been, and the foliage was not so dense. Tentatively he lowered himself into the water, to test its depth. It was half mud and scarcely over his ankles. From this he knew he was near the edge of the swamp.

The man ahead was on the hard ground now, for the sound of his steps had ceased. Wade abandoned making a pathway of the roots and hurried on through the slush. As he reached the hard ground there was no sign of the other man.

CALIFORNIANS GET MEDALS FOR BRAVERY

PITTSBURGH, April 26.—UP—Eighteen acts of heroism were recognized by the Carnegie hero fund commission at its spring meeting here this afternoon and in each instance a bronze medal was awarded.

Among the recipients were three Californians whose heroism in rescuing persons from drowning was recognized by the commission.

Four others lost their lives in the performance of their life saving feats and to the dependants of two of these pensions aggregating $1920 a year were granted and to the dependant of one of the others $500 was awarded to be used for a purpose sanctioned by the commission.

3 Honored

The three Californians honored were Herbert H. Searl, 14, San Diego; Carl Seidner, 28, Rohnerville, and James W. Brooks, 25, Crescent City.

The San Diego boy rescued a chum, Warren H. Bresler, 12, from drowning, June 26, 1927, after the latter had fallen from a sail boat into San Diego bay.

Searls, with a younger brother, was in the boat. He headed the craft into the wind and told his brother to remain in the vessel while he plunged over-board and swam 150 feet through choppy waters to Warren who was wholly underwater.

Made Rescue

Both submerged when Warren grabbed Searls about the neck after the latter had brought him to the surface. After a struggle. Searl freed himself and towed Warren toward another boat some distance away. A man in a row boat held the pair from the water before the vessel was reached.

James W. Brooks, 25, and Carl Seidner, were awarded medals for saving Floyd Peters, 13, and Kirby Peters, 36, and attempting to save Maude S. Peters 45, from drowning in the Pacific ocean near Requa, Calif.

Carried into the Pacific by a strong current in the Klamath river the night of Sept. 4, 1927, the Peters family was stranded when a boat capsized in breakers off the coast.

Peters and his son clung to the wreckage of the vessel, but Mrs. Peters was lost after a struggle to maintain her hold.

Saves Men

Seidner, who could barely swim, and Brooks manned a fishing boat and after bucking waves which twice hurled them back on the shore rowed through the breakers, five to seven feet high.

Searching through the darkness, the men finally came upon the capsized boat and took Peters and his son from the water.

After searching for Mrs. Peters, they skillfully maneuvered the boat back through the breakers where it was tossed high on the shore by waves.

STORM MAY OBSCURE VIEW OF SUN ECLIPSE TOMORROW

ond, the spectrum of the sun's atmosphere and a multitude of other studies connected with the phenomenon.

While astronomers observe the progress of the eclipse with their highly sensitive instruments and record on photographic plates the course of the moon as it crosses the sun's face amateurs will watch with probably just as keen interest through smoked glasses and make recording, with the ordinary camera by using instantaneous exposures.

Long Line

The scientific camps are stretched in a line between Camptonville, Calif., and Gerlach, Nev. Airplanes will be used to get above the clouds should weather conditions be unfavorable for land observations while the travel of the moon's shadow across the earth will be recorded on photographic plates by photographers in airplanes flying at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

The eclipse will start at 9:36 a. m. PST when a thin dark edge will be observable on the sun's surface at 11 a. m. PST the sun will be totally eclipse.

Every instrument will be trained on the sun for this one moment as the total eclipse will last only long enough for one photograph to be taken.

There will be three important airplane expeditions connected with the study of the eclipse. Two of them are under supervision of the Lick Observatory party, and the other will be directed by Mrs. Isabel M. Lewis, famous astronomer and author of astronomical works, who came here from Washington D. C. to observe the phenomenon.

Motion Pictures

Mrs. Lewis has made her headquarters at Honey Lake, Lassen county in the extreme northern portion of California. She will take motion pictures of the eclipse from her camp situated at an elevation of 4000 feet while two amphiban planes from the San Diego airbase, will record the moon's shadow on the earth. She hopes to gain information from the sun spots which may have a bearing on their cause of magnetic storms.

The Lick Observatory airplane expedition is under the direction of Dr. Hamilton M. Jeffers, who expects to make several photograph's of the sun's corona during total eclipse which lasts but a second by using a fast camera of three inches focus. Equipment for this work will be in an army plane piloted by First Lieut. E. B. Bobzien of Crissy Field. In a second plane photographic equipment will be carried with which to record the moon's shadow travelling at half a mile a second. Both plane patries will do its photographic work from an altitude of three miles.

While Dr. Jefferson directs the air expedition above Camptonville the ground party under the direction of Dr. J. H. Moore will duplicate the work with similar instruemnt.s

At Doyle Calif., the Mount Wilson Observatory party supervised by Dr. Seth B. Nicholson has completed final adjustment of its instruments. An interesting experiment is to be made by Dr. Harold D. Babcock of this party. He will photograph spectrum of the sun's chrome-sphere. This will be attempted by the use of infra red rays of much longer wave lengths than has heretofore been used.

Dr. Heber D. Curtis, director of the Allegheny Observatory of the University of Pittsburgh and his part yare stationed some 13 miles from Gerlach, Nev. His party is concentrating on the flash specturm. A camera 81 inches long will be used to photograph the total eclipse.

Aprivate expedition headed by Dr. R. L. Waterfield is stationed at Camptonville. This party is also concentrating on the recording of the spectrum of the sun's atmosphere. The red light wave method will also be used by this patry.

BANKER FLIES RACE WITH DEATH

High winds, sweeping down from the Siskiyous, whose song Rey wanted to hear in his ears when he died, late this afternoon forced down the plane in which the desperately ill man was being carried from Oakland airport to his home in Yreka—to die.

The plane, out of gasoline, was refueled, and flown to Redding to spend the night.

Ley, a banker at Yreka, was told today that the illness from which he had suffered from five weeks, was hopeless. Calling his wife and sister to the bedside, he quietly said:

"They tell me it won't be long. Get a plane. I want to see one more sunrise before the snows leaves the hills."

Doctors warned him the rendezvous might occur enroute; the weather experts cautioned him it hight occur in a dive to the high Siskiyou peaks, where the storm clouds were gathering. Ley hoped it would be postponed until he was in his own bed.

His wife and sister rode with him into the storm. Sid Du Bois, veteran pilot, was at the controls of the plane.

Man Didn't Climb Pole

DENVER, Colo., April 26.—(UP)—Maybe Charles A. Roberts did not climb a lamp post after all.

The Colorado supreme court can believe it or not.

The grievance committee of the State Bar association, seeking revocation of his right to practice law, charged, among other things, that Roberts in a state of intoxication, ascended a lamp post, on Curtis street.

Roberts admitted a policeman took him in tow at the particular corner, but indignantly denied he was guilty of such unprofessional conduct as perching atop the said lamp post.

BRITISH MOVE TO END REVOLT

BOMBAY, April 25.—(UP)—The government abandoned today its attitude of outward indifference toward Mahatma Ghandi's independence campaign, and undertook a firm policy to halt the spread of riotous outbreaks in India.

Peshawar, the scene of severe fighting and the most violent agitation this week, became an armed camp under great tension with renewal of anti-government demonstrations last night and today.

The Distribution Census Needs Your Help!

Now that the census of enumeration is complete, or nearly so, Uncle Sam has launched the distribution census, which is of the utmost importance to business.

Richmond business men can help themselves materially by helping this census. The Department of Commerce says:

Distribution and marketing, rather than production now form the most important problems facing business men. It is no longer a question of how to produce more commodities, but rather how can the commodities that are already being produced, be tributed.

In the opinion of many students of business, one of the reasons why greater progress has not been made in the field of distribution has been the lack of adequate statistical information about that process. Although a great deal is known about the quantity of various commodities produced, all sight, statistically, has been lost of practically every commodity after it has passed the factory door. The total volume of retail trade in this country is not known and guesses vary by ten billion dollars or more.

Consequently, many people have contended that a Census of Distribution, such as is now under way, should form the basis for a great advance in business by showing something about the quantities of commodities marketed, the channels through which they reach the consumer and other related facts. They believe the census will enable business men to set up measuring sticks which would show the direction in which business is moving — that it will give facts instead of hunches upon which to base plans and decisions, and will greatly aid in constructive thinking which is the one great force for progress in any business.

For these very good reasons and others too numerous to dwell upon here, the Chamber of Commerce advises local business men in all lines to assist the government in compiling these im- distributed.
